

A Dreamers' Den.

It is a strong light he held before the sleeper's eyes he is almost sure to awake, but at the very moment he may have a dream of some tremendous fire, perhaps that his house is in flames. The ear of the dreamer is generally on the alert, and proves a going to the mysterious spirit world. It is a dreamer's den, a place where the soul of a little child, the air with music, or they dream of a delightful concert. A loud noise will produce terrible thunder and crashings unutterable, and at the same time awake the sleeper. According to Dr. Abercrombie, a gentleman who had been a soldier dreamed that he heard a signal-gun, saw the puffs of smoke, and the flashes of light, heard the bustle of the streets, the assembling of troops, etc. Just then he was roused by his wife who had dreamed precisely the same dream, with this addition, that she saw the enemy land, and a friend of her husband killed; and she awoke in a fright. This occurred at Edinburgh at the time when a French invasion was feared, and it has been ascribed to a signal-gun at the first approach of the foe. This dream was caused, it appears, by the fall of a pair of tongs in the room above, and the excited state of the public mind was quite sufficient to account for both dreams turning on the same subject. An old lady, a friend of the writer, related a similar dream which occurred to her just before the battle of Waterloo, when the fear of an invasion by Napoleon was at its height. She heard the march of troops in the streets, and the screams of the populace. They broke into her own house, ransacked it, and pursued her with bayonet. She fell on the ground and pretended to be dead. After sundry threats, which seemed to her "roving spirit," to be quite innocuous, the soldiers remarked that she was "done for." They departed, and she escaped to consciousness. This dream was no doubt caused in the first instance by a noise in the house or street, and the painful bayonet thrusts by some slight irritation, such as a hair-pin or other object, to the nose. Whichever of a sleeper's ear will often produce a dream; and there are cases on record in which people who sleep with their ears open have been led through dreadful agonies at the will of their wakeful tormentors. The vivid description given of a young officer so treated by his comrades is both interesting and suggestive. In changing our position, as we constantly do in sleep, we touch the bedclothes, etc., perhaps the nose gets tickled, or the ear of the foot, and dreams painful or pleasant are the consequence. These may seem trivial causes, but it must be remembered that the mind is ready to fly into the realms of fancy at the slightest stimulation. People have often dreamed of spending the severest winters in Siberia, and of joining the expeditions to the North Pole, simply because the bedclothes have been thrown off during sleep. It is said that a moderate heat applied to the soles of the feet will generate dreams of volcanoes, burning coals, etc. Dr. Gregory dreamed of walking up the crater of Mount Etna, and that he felt the earth warm under his feet. He had placed a hot-water bottle at his feet on going to bed. The memory of a visit had once paid to Mount Vesuvius supplied the mental picture. Persons suffering from toothache imagine that the operator is tugging at the faulty tooth, and somehow cannot extract it; or, as in Dr. Gregory's case, he draws out the wrong one, and leaves the aching tooth in statu quo. A blister applied to the head is highly suggestive of being attacked by Indians, especially if Mayanoid or a ghastly details are at all fresh in the memory. — Temple Bar.

Feats of Engineering.

New York must have quicker communication with its suburbs. The thousands of business men and women who work all day in its stores and offices must be able to reach their homes in Harlem, Brooklyn, or Jersey City, in thirty minutes from Broadway. To meet the wants of the upper part of New York the elevated roads were constructed. They are the perfection of railway traveling—for the passenger—smooth, free from noise and dust, besides their wonderful rapidity of transit. Within a year it is expected the East River bridge will be open to the passage of the great army of people who spend their days in New York and their nights in Brooklyn. The latter city has been fitly called "a lodging-house for New York." Four hundred men are at work on the approaches to this bridge. They are massive granite arches, supporting the road-bed, rising gradually, till it crosses at a dizzy height the river, the bridge is so high that most ships may pass with top-galant masts standing. It would not do that the finest harbor in the world should be obstructed by a bridge at the water level. Governor Cornell has signed a bill appropriating two million five hundred thousand dollars to finish the most wonderful suspension bridge the world has yet seen. The third means of communication now being pushed rapidly forward is a tunnel for trains under the Hudson River to Jersey City. There are two tunnels for that part which lies under the river's bed, and they unite in one at each end. This double tunnel is lined with iron plates, and faced with brick three feet thick. The clay excavated from the tunnel is used to make the bridges to line it, of which more than two thousand are required for each running foot of water. The interior will be painted white, and lighted with gas. The estimated expense of this work is ten million of dollars. The work goes on day and night; three gangs of men being employed eight hours each, thus accomplishing three days work every twenty-four hours. All the work is done by the electric light, and thus one great invention helps another. The total length of the bridge will be over a half mile, including the approaches, though only about a mile of this distance is under the bed of the river. When it is done four hundred trains per day can pass safely, delivering passengers and freight in the very heart of New York. — Youth's Companion.

SWEPT UNDER THE ICE.

Drowning of Daniel Beck, While Talking to His Would-be Rescuers—His Body Found.

Yesterday afternoon a young man named Daniel Beck, who boards with Mr. Young's family in the First ward, went up the river for the first time, accompanied by Young's son. They crossed the railroad bridge, and then started up the river on the east side. Beck after a little while took off his overcoat and hung it on the bank, and went on. A little further on his comrade becoming tired concluded to return home, but Beck said he would go further up, and made the boy get his coat as he went back, and take that home. Some time after the separation, Beck, in skating about near Thomas Pratt's place, fell through the ice, which had been worn thin by the current, and began crying for help. Pratt's family, Strunk's family, and others, heard the calls for help, and hurried to the river. Arthur Strunk and Vernon Strunk, on reaching the bank saw Beck clinging to the ice. He told the boys to shove out to him a boat lying on the shore. They did so, and with it a rail. He gave directions as to just what he wanted done by the boys, and warned them not to go too far out lest they, too, should fall in. He talked collectedly, gave his directions coolly, and in accordance with them the boys shoved the boat out as far as they dared, and then taking the rail used that to shove it still further out. It still lacked two feet of reaching him, but he warned them it was dangerous to come further. They proposed sliding the rail to him, but he told them that he would rather have the boat, and if they could shove it two feet further, he could reach it. They ran the risk, and by using the rail managed to shove the boat there. They saw it tilt at one end, and when they looked again they found he had sunk, as though in reaching for the boat he had lost his hold, and the current had swept him away.

David Pratt and others came, and a search was made for his body, and kept up until 9 o'clock last night. It was returned to-day, and this afternoon the body was found by David Pratt. The Strunk boys did nobly in their efforts to save the young man, and others joined equally nobly in trying to find his body. Young Beck's father lives at Sandwich, Ill., and has been notified by telegram, and has replied asking for further facts about the drowning. Young Beck has been living here for several months, and has spent most of his time in working for farmers near Janesville, and is reported as a steady, industrious young man. An inquest is being held this afternoon by Justice Brooks.

The remains were brought to the city this afternoon, and placed in the city hall.

MILWAUKEE PRIDE.

How the New Chamber of Commerce was Opened with Speeches and Feasting.

The opening of the new temple of trade in Milwaukee last Thursday was one of those events which took hold of the interest and attention of the whole State. The trains brought in prominent citizens from all parts of the State, who had been invited to attend the opening ceremonies. Hotels were crowded, and there was a throng to share in the doings. The new Chamber of Commerce is a massive and imposing building of grey Minnesota granite, and grey Ankerite stone, and is remarkably substantial and free from gingerbread work, and is made thoroughly fire proof. It is six stories including the basement, having a total height of 100 feet from curb to cornice. The width is 120 feet, and the depth 100 feet. The Chamber of Commerce proper is 60 by 120 feet, and adjoining it are offices for the secretary and directors, a smoking room, toilet and cloak room, etc. The Chamber is 46 feet in height, and in the center of the ceiling is a stained skylight 24 feet square. It is finished and furnished elegantly, and with great skill and taste. The cost reaches about $250,000.

There was a crowd of ladies and gentlemen to take possession of this elegant new building, and at 3:30 o'clock President Bodden opened the doings and read a letter from Hon. Alex. Mitchell expressing his regret at being unable to be present, business detaining him in New York, and stating that his nephew John Johnston would represent him on the occasion. Mr. Johnston was introduced and made a fine speech, closing with a formal tender of the key of the building to the President of the Chamber of Commerce, who in receiving it, made a brief address, closing by reading a letter from Angus Smith, whose health prevented him from attending. George Godfrey closed the speech-making, and the doors were thrown open, until 6 o'clock, the public generally using the time to thus see the interior of the building, a stream of people coming and going continually.

In the evening the banquet was given, and it surely was a banquet. No such array of tempting delicacies were ever spread in Milwaukee before, and no more skillful arrangement was ever devised. Mr. Antisdel, of the Newhall house, prepared the feast, and eclipsed even the expectations of his best friends. There were four long tables, at which were seated over three hundred guests. A gayer scene of feasting was never presented, with the flood of brightness streaming from the electric lights, and with flowers and music, and all the glitter and jollity of a banquet hall.

At 11 o'clock all being satisfied with feasting, President Bodden announced as the first toast "The President of the United States," which was greeted with cheers, drunk in silence, and followed by more cheers, and a national air played by the orchestra. In response to the toast "The commercial organizations of the United States," President Charles Randolph, of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce, spoke, calling forth loud applause. Congressman Williams, of this city, responded to the toast "The commercial men of the Northwest." He was greeted with cheers so loud and continuous that it was several minutes before he could be heard, and Mr. Williams' speech, which was one of his liveliest and most eloquent, was frequently broken into by the applause of the hearers, and certainly deserved all the enthusiastic endorsement it received, and at its close three cheers were given with zest. Van P. McLaren followed, and called upon A. S. De Bille, Danish Minister, at Washington, to reply to a toast, which he did in one of the happiest and best received speeches of the evening. Lieutenant-Governor J. M. Bingham responded to "The Legal Profession," and Colonel C. K. Pier, of Fond du Lac, to "The Press." From that time on there was an informal, happy giving of toasts, and responding thereto. Songs were sung, jokes cracked, and a general season of enjoyment, and hilarity indulged in. It was one of the biggest, happiest feasts yet put on record, and all that participated will find great satisfaction in sending memory back over it, time and again.

Mrs. D. Morrison, Pougham Centre, P. Q., writing about Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, says: "George Bell used it on his son, and it cured him of Rheumatism with only a few applications. The balms of the bottle was used by an old gentleman for Arthritic with the best results. It acts like a charm."
